

Extreme Hot Weather Guidance for Transporters and Organisers of live animal transport by road

Exposure to high temperatures and humidity is a major threat to animal welfare during transport. Failure to

Poultry

- If the weather forecast predicts extreme temperatures at any point during the journey, the transport should not take place
- Catching operations and transport should occur at night or in coolest parts of the day
- Make sure the loading area is protected from bright sun.
-